

15 New York Gallery Shows Where You'll Find Exciting Young Artists This June

By Casey Lesser
June 2, 2016

A new crop of fresh talent kicks off the summer months at galleries across New York, spanning solo debuts and smart group shows to complement your social media addiction or upturn perceptions of the female form.

“Mal Maison” at Maccarone

JUNE 7–AUGUST 12, 98 MORTON STREET

Keltie Ferris, Harmony Hammond, Rosy Keyser, Becky Kolsrud, Simone Leigh, Alice Mackler, Brie Ruais, Tschabalala Self, Shinique Smith

These nine powerful female artists (born between 1931 and 1990) create paintings and sculptures that span figuration and abstraction, though here they share an impulse to reconsider and thus reconfigure the image of the female body in their art. The breadth and variety of works on view, from Kolsrud's paintings of women behind grates to Ferris's oil and pigment self-portraits, reflects on the complexity of the female experience, which defies any single representation.

Becky Kolsrud, Group Portrait with Security Gate, 2015. Courtesy of the artist and JTT.